

Overstaying our welcome since last week

Done and dusted

The dust has settled on a remarkable Injury Schemes Seminar. A week later we find our minds wandering back to a purer time: a time when cross-dressing and hip swinging were enthusiastically embraced, and when wearing balloons on your head was not considered an impediment to making a sales pitch. Simpler times....

The long bus to the airport – situated halfway between the hotel and Sydney – gave us time to reflect on the rebranded Injury Schemes Seminar. The new name, along with the seminar theme of ‘Balancing Outcomes’, seemed to stimulate delegates and allowed for a real focus on the injured people at the centre of all of our different schemes. There was more attention given to the purpose of our schemes rather than to the administration of our schemes. Let’s just be thankful that the first name suggested by the organising committee didn’t get up:

*The Advancement of Rehabilitation and Recovery and Return to Wellness but don’t mention Compensation or Accident Seminar**

**Formerly the Accident Compensation Seminar*

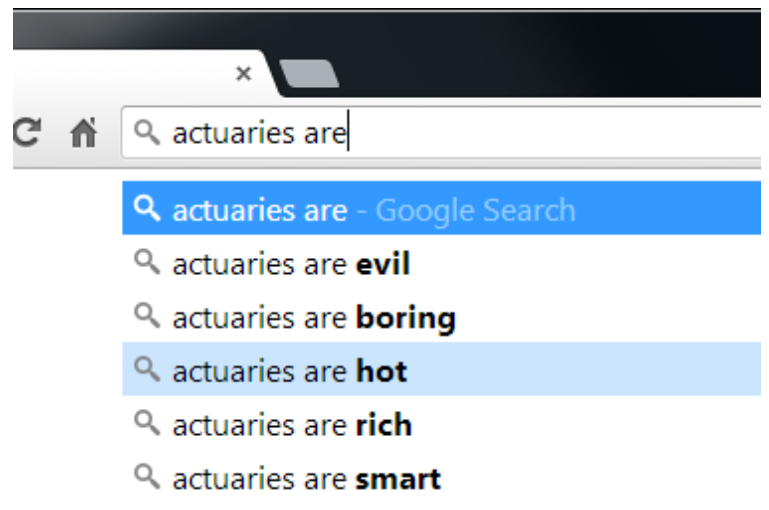

Our congratulations to the Actuaries Institute, the organising committee, presenters and delegates. We look forward to seeing you all again, two years from now.

No ice swans were harmed in the making of this newsletter.

Andrew Smith gleefully accepts a Taylor Fry KeepCup from Paul Driessen to avoid the shame of being seen with a PwC disposable. Good man.

According to Google auto-fill...

We'd like to thank the Institute staff, particularly Julia, for accepting our 4am emails.
We'd like to apologise to the Institute staff, particularly Sarah, for calling them annoying.

The Gala Dinner

There has never been so much latex at an Actuaries Institute seminar

Peace, love and cross-dressing at Comcare

And nobody told Bill that it was fancy dress

Sit Ubu, sit. Good dog.

Ladies' night

"Why must I be surrounded by freakin' idiots?!"

A riddle, inside an enigma ...

You can book these creative types for your child's next birthday party

